Paintings Of Shakespeare Plays Get Inspiration From Film Stars

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Deborah Kerr, Claudette Colbert, Clif Charlise, Leslie Calhern—these people from Hollywood pictures are all in some pictures recently on view in New York.

They are not moving pictures, but oil paintings.

You may have to look hard, however, to spot these celebrities. These are not portraits. They are idealizations of Shakespearian characters with the real-life filmland personages serving as models in the preliminary stages of the works.

The artist is M. Sivel. How can she get the famous to pose for her? They are her friends, for M.-for-Miriam Sivel is the wife of Dore Schary, moving picture producer and writer, and boss of M-G-M.

Among other Schary household familiars to be seen in the show of two dozen pictures at the Associated American Artists Galleries are the two young Schary daughters, the maid, the butler's wife. In one oil, there's a Mahonri Young sculpture from the Schary collection; and there's a glimpse of a studio corner.

Before she ventured her own interpretations of Shakespeare's people, Mrs. Schary explained, she reread the plays, looked up the dramatist's own source material, and consulted the Freudians. In her paintings, soundly within the academic tradition, she sees Hamlet as 19 or 20 years old, Portia as a sweet and fragile person; and believing that Shakespeare never saw a real Moor, she resorts to her own notion of his notion.

Born in Newark, N. J., in a family of musicians, Mrs. Schary played the piano, but turned early to art, and studied for six years at the National Academy of Design and the Art Students League here. Her three children didn't leave her much time for work at the easel, but for 14 years now she has been at it again, giving five full days a week to art. This is her second New York show.

RECORDS

Recent high spots, or loud spots, in recording releases include in particular two operas, one old, one new, one merry and full of laughter, one tragic and brimming with tears.

The new work, Gian-Carlo Menotti's "The Saint of Bleecker Street," is a timely issue, for it has won a second Pulitzer for the Italian-born composer.

Except for two short cuts, "The Saint" is a complete re-do of the work that played this winter on Broadway. "Musical drama," as it is called by the author of both words and music, it takes two full records in the RCA-Victor album. Principal roles are Assunta, played by Catherine Akos; Carmela, by Maria di Gerlando; Maria Corona, Maria Mario; Don Marco, Leon Lishner; Annina, Gabrielle Ruggiero; Michele, David Poleri; Desiderio, Gloria Lane; and Salvatore, David Aiken. Thomas Schippers conducts.

This is a first-rate recording of a work which perhaps marks a pause in the phenomenal development of Menotti's talent. The plot is the conflict of believer and doubting Thomas — doubting Michele. The listener is always interested, and sometimes gripped and stirred. It is true, however, that earlier Menotti works, for instance, "Consul" or "Medium," have been gripping and tense in every passage, all the way; and I sometimes wonder whether his music here carries the full emotional and ethical substance of his great theme.

The other opera, by an older master, is Rossini's "La Centerentola." As played by the New York Opera company, it is the funniest and most hilarious work on the operatic stage, bar none. This is a Glyndebourne festival production, and again RCA-Victor. Few of the singers are known here—Alda Noni and Fernanda Cadoni as the wicked sisters, Marina de Gabarain as Cinderella: Hervey Alan as Alidoro; and Ian Wallace, Juan Oncina and Sesto Bruscantini, Vittorio Gui conducts. You'll love every minute of it.

Dr. H. Council Trenholm Commencement Speaker

By MABLE THOMAS LEE
Phone 2304-J Sheffield
210 Blake Street

Dr. H. Council Trenholm, President of the Alabama State College, Montgomery, was the celebrated speaker for the 59th commencement, Friday evening at 7:30, and was also honored for his 40th year as an alumnus of Trenholm High School.

He finished in the Class of 1915. There were ten members in his class. The only living members of his class are Mrs. Mamie Robinson Steele, Mrs. Rebecca Ricks Winston, Mrs. Johnnie Coger McGregor, Mrs. Clara Doak Vaughn, Mrs. Eula Kent White, and Mrs. Emma Kinsler Davis; who were invited to be present at the graduating exercises.

There was a presentation of 40th Year Anniversary Award to Dr. H. Council Trenholm at the end of the program. All classes of fives (1905,-1915-1925-1935-1945 and 1955) stood as the presentation of the award was being made by one member of the classes.

There were 26 members in the class of 1955, seven of whom have scholarships to the Alabama State College in Montgomery. There will be five go to Alabama A and M College, Normal, Ala., two of whom will receive scholarships. Two will go to Tennessee State A (and I) University, Nashville. Three other members have not made a decision as to what college they will attend. Hence, 16 members or 62 per cent will go to college this fall. P. H. Wesley, Principal.
