To Amend Constitution In Effort ent Integration In Public Schools

JOHNSON ... Nov. 12 (AP)— ... Stanley's Educa- ... mission tonight system ... ediate action to ... constitution as ... program intend- ... orced racial in- ... public schools. ... the program is ... state funds for ... ll children, both ... white and Negro, in private schools rather than allow integration in the state's public school system. Contingent on amending Section 141 of the state constitution to take out a prohibition on the use of public funds for the private schools, the program would provide: 1. A plan of assignment permitting children where no public schools are operated to be given tuition grants for educational purposes.

The "package plan" was contained in a report delivered to the governor and made public tonight.

The only immediate recommendation was that the governor call a special session of the General Assembly "for the purpose of initiating a limited constitutional convention."

"If our children are to be educated and if enforced integration is to be avoided, it is now clear that Section 141 must be amended," said the commission in its unanimous 19-page report.

Virginia's Supreme Court of Appeals ruled last Monday in a test case arranged at the request of the governor that public funds may not be used for the education of children in private schools because of the barrier set up in Section 141.

The court noted that if such was deemed a proper course, the Legislature should move to amend the constitution in the prescribed manner.

Stanley said he would reach a decision "within a few days" on the recommendation for a special Assembly session.

Negroes Set Goodwyn Tax Bill Rally

A big rally in support of the proposed Goodwyn Amendment for education will be held in the Sterling Negro High School auditorium in Sheffield on Wednesday, Nov. 16, at 7:30 p.m., David S. Priest, president of the Sterling Teachers' Association, announced Saturday.

The rally will be under the sponsorship of that association.

The program is another in a series of many similar programs being held all over the state. Purpose is to further clarify and explain to the citizens of the Sheffield area the proposed amendment. "It is hoped that as a result of this meeting the people will become more concerned about the plight of education in Alabama and thereby go on record in support of this worthy cause," Mr. Priest said.

The principal speaker for the program will be Representative Jack Huddleston, of Colbert County. Mrs. J. J. Watkins, attendance supervisor for Colbert County, and representatives of the Sheffield Board of Education will also appear on the program.

"All people interested in better schools and better education for the children of Sheffield are asked to be present at this meeting," Mr. Priest said.

Brazil Returns To Normal After Bloodless Revolt

By FRED L. STROZIER

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 12 (AP)—Brazil returned to normal today after a swift and efficient bloodless revolt—staged to prevent a revolution.

All opposition — and the grim threat of civil war among the armed force branches—collapsed in the face of determined action by supporters of law and order led by Gen. Henrique Teixeira Lott. There had been no fighting.

The man Gen. Lott installed as temporary president in a predawn coup Friday, Nereu Ramos, appeared secure in office and an air of calm legality clothed the whole coup. The new government took a firm grip with the backing of the army and Congress.

Carlos Coimbra da Luz, ousted as the temporary president, ordered back to Rio de Janeiro harbor the cruiser Talmandare on which he fled to refuge Thursday night. He said the order was his last official act and begged the armed forces not to fight among themselves.

The army coup encountered open, though passive resistance from the navy and air force. But the air minister Maj. Gen. Eduardo Gomes signaled the collapse of resistance. He had rushed to Sao Paulo, Brazil's big industrial city, yesterday to organize resistance to the new temporary president. Today he ordered the air force to halt opposition.

Ramos, 66, who was president of the Senate, thus became Brazil's third president in four days in a complicated situation dotted with paradoxes.

Gen. Lott was the spokesman for army forces which backed constitutional processes. He insisted the present government should legally turn over its powers on schedule Jan. 31 to the newly elected administration. The new administration is to be headed by Juscelino Kubitschek as president and Joao Goulart as vice president. They were elected last month by big margins. Gen. Lott is known to disapprove of them politically, although defending their right to be inaugurated.

Some military elements were displeased by Kubitschek's victory and with the Communist support he received. He is a Social Democrat, and is regarded as the political heir of the late President Getulio Vargas, who killed himself last year when members of his government were under fire on charges of corruption.

Lott and Ramos are members of the Social Democrat party, founded by Vargas, but Lutz represented the dissident, anti-Kubitschek faction.

But as an example of the genuineness of this strange revolution, it was even pointed out here that Luz, though ousted from the provisional presidency, would probably be able to return to his seat in the House of Deputies and continue to be president of the House if he wishes. There had been reports that some of the associates who fled with him aboard the cruiser would be arrested.
