Alabama KKK Splits Wide Open, Stated

Birmingham News In Copyrighted Story Makes Revelation

BIRMINGHAM, (AP)—The Ku Klux Klan in Alabama "is split wide open," the Birmingham News said in a copyrighted story today.

The News quoted the Rev. Horn of Talladega, Baptist minister and a top-ranking KKK member, as saying he had been charged with treason to the Federated Ku Klux Klan and summoned to trial in Birmingham Saturday.

The Rev. Horn was one of the governors of the ferrated Klan, headed by William Hugh Morris, Birmingham roofing contractor. Horn told the News he would refuse to go to the "treason trial" called by Morris, and in turn accused Morris of treason to the association of Georgia Klans, which Horn now supports.

Trouble in Klan ranks in Alabama has been apparent for months. Morris took command from Dr. E. P. Pruitt of Birmingham last summer while Morris was in jail on a contempt of court citation.

Morris announced Pruitt's resignation from his jail cell, but Pruitt first denied it.

The Rev. Horn told the News he became a Klan organizer in 1948 and organized Klaverns at Talladega, Ashland, Lineville, Pell City, Odenville and Tarrant City.

Horn then became one of the governors of the Klan, along with Morris and Pruitt.

"Morris was jealous of all of us," Horn said. "He wanted to be head of the organization and began this working toward that end.

During Morris' stay in jail, for refusing to produce Klan membership lists for grand jury, Horn said he urged the various Klaverns to withdraw from the federated Ku Klux Klans and become independent. Later, Horn added, Morris changed his mind.

Last Saturday, Horn added, the Talladega and Tarrant City Klaverns joined the association of Georgia Klans, headed by Sam Roper of Atlanta.

Horn said Morris had served notice on Roper that he intended to fight the Georgia Klan boss "for every Klan and every Klansman in Alabama."

Horn, now an organizer for the Roper branch of the KKK, said he had gotten many members for that organization.

Horn said Morris' summons for his "trial for treason" included the statement that "this is the first of a series of such trials".

The Talladega minister said Morris originally was a Kleagle organizer in the association of Georgia Klans, but pulled out to set up the Federated Ku Klux Klans, Inc., here.

The Ku Klux Klan has been in the news in Alabama since last spring and summer when state officials blamed the hooded order for a series of floggings in north Alabama counties.

The state legislature passed an anti-masking law. Eighteen persons have been indicted for flogging and related crimes in Jefferson (Birmingham) county.

SENTENCED FOR THEFT

MOBILE, (AP)—A 21-year-old Elmira, N. Y. man was under a two-year prison sentence today for stealing mail from a bag at Citronelle, Ala. Harry Edward Van Horn was charged with ripping open an unguarded mail pouch and taking its contents. Assistant U. S. District Attorney William Cowan said the bag contained nothing but newspapers. Van Horn told officers he used some of the paper to build a fire, and slept on the rest.

Tombigbee River At Demopolis On Rampage

DEMOPOLIS, (AP)—The muddy crest of the broad Tombigbee river reached this western Alabama town at 58 feet today without causing any damage.

An overnight rise of three-tenths of a foot brought the rain-swollen stream to its peak. The weather bureau at Mobile said the river would remain stationary for several hours then begin a slow fall.

Upstream in Mississippi, the Tombigbee continued its fall at Aberdeen and Columbus, and there were no further heavy rains.

The city of Demopolis, located on high ground, is expected to be free of the overflow. Some farms in lowlands along the river are partly covered. Most of the inundated area is woodlands.

The Mobile district engineers office said yesterday that the flood condition would stop preliminary work on the giant Demopolis lock and dam. Little damage was expected, however, from the overflow.

Acheson Backs International A-Bomb Control

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Secretary of state Acheson made clear today that even if the United States decides to develop a super a-bomb it will stick to its policy of seeking tight international control of atomic energy.

Acheson discussed the subject in circumspect language in response to questions at a news conference.

As he phrased it, he said he does not know of any prospective atomic weapons development in the United States which would cause the United States to change its policy on international control.

Acheson knows, of course — as does most everyone in Washington — that the government is hotly debating under the surface the question of whether to try to develop a hydrogen atomic bomb that might be 1,000 times more powerful than the original uranium a-bomb.

He also said he knew of no atomic developments in Russia that would make the United States want to change its policy.

There have been reports that President Truman is being urged to make a new approach to the Russians for an international atomic control agreement before deciding whether to go ahead with attempted development of hydrogen bombs.

Acheson's comments did not rule out a new approach to the Russians — but it did appear to eliminate so far as he is concerned any basic change in United States policy at this time.

descriptions of the holdup men." Descriptions given by witnesses varied. The best indication that all were about five feet nine inches, weighing approximately 180 pounds. Six wore rubbers, the seventh crepe-soled shoes.

Reaching the wire enclosed vault room unobserved, one of the gunmen shouted:

"Open up. This is a stickup. Don't give us any trouble."

Several of the robbers moved speedily into the room and scooped the loot into laundry bags and disappeared as quickly as they entered.

The five employes were trussed and gagged.

Several company shotguns were on a rack in the company office. The employes didn't have a chance to get near them before they were covered by the grotesquely masked robbers.

Thomas B. Lloyd, head cashier, said he came out of the vault to find himself looking into the muzzles of seven guns.

"I exclaimed 'Oh, My God'," Lloyd said that Charles Greil, 44 a company messenger, was armed "but it would have been sure death for him to reach for his gun."

The gunmen all wore gloves and carried a length of corded rope knotted at each end.

"They ordered us to lie face-down on the floor," Lloyd said "Although they had planned for a long time, they initially tied our hands behind our backs and then our feet.

"Then they put strips of white masking tape over our mouths.

"They snapped up the money bags off the little wooden platform carts and dumped them into larger bags brought with them.

"Then they talked, they spoke in low voices. None of their voices was distinguishable.

"While some were picking up the money bags, others went to a rack where we kept the pistols. They emptied the guns of the money they had in them and left. The whole thing didn't take more than 20 minutes."

BLACK CADILLAC IS SOUGHT IN ROBBERY

NEW YORK, (AP)—A black Cadillac bearing Massachusetts license plate wearing black masks lying on the rear seat was sought in New York today in connection with the million dollar robbery in Boston last night.

John Koziatek, a partner in a filling station, said the car passed by his station in upper Manhattan with three men in the front seat.

"Give us 10 gallons of gas and hurry up about it," he quoted the driver as saying.

Tyatek said:

"I then started to pump the gas, and I put about five and a half gallons in before I looked through the window into the rear of the car. On the back seat I saw what looked like ladies' stockings with holes in them but I looked again and saw they were full-faced masks—black masks—like Halloween masks."

Seven men, all wearing Halloween masks, entered Brink's Inc., a money transportation firm, last night and robbed attendants who were counting money. After the robbers Boston police broadcast an alarm for a Cadillac.

After the car drove away Koziatek said he heard a broadcast about the robbery and called police.

DENHAM SEEKS

court this afternoon to apply for a temporary injunction.

This type of application calls for a hearing to be set before the court before any order is issued.

Denham said that he is not asking for a temporary restraining order—the kind of legal maneuvering which calls for immediate action by the court.

Conceivably, it might be weeks before the court would act.

Denham's complaint charges that Lewis has been failing to bargain in good faith with the coal operators.

The Taft-Hartley law requires bargaining in good faith and also permits the NLRB counsel to seek court orders barring "unfair practices" by management or a union.

In a series of complaints to Denham last December, mine operators said the three-day mining week was an "unfair practice" intended to coerce them into signing an illegal contract with Lewis.

Denham had been studying these arguments and the contract since the announcement today that the operators' contention.

Denham said he would ask the court to bar the union from:

"Using any coercive methods, and especially any stoppage or reduction of normal work days or production anywhere except in the mines, for the purpose of coercing the mine operators into the acceptance by any of the illegal or restrictive demands x x x."

Whatever may come of it, it was clear that Denham's moves was pushing the crucial situation along to some break in the present stalemate.

Pressure is growing, too, for President Truman to step in under the T-H law and ask the courts to halt a strike. A group of Republican senators renewed at a capitol press day their demands that Mr. Truman invoke the T-H law.

The GOP lawmakers outlined their views to the Senate Labor committee at hearings on a resolution which would tell Mr. Truman that Congress feels he ought to act quickly.

Leading off for the eight sponsors of the resolution, Senator Ferguson (R-Mich) told the committee that:

1. His information is that two days ago there were 20,000,000 less tons of coal above the ground than there were on March 23, 1948, when President Truman declared a coal emergency.

2. The Interstate Commerce committee in restricting coal burning locomotive operations last month, had asserted that an emergency requiring immediate action exists in all sections of the country."

Individual legislators also have been urging the president to act. One White House caller today was Rep. Battle (D-Ala) who said told Mr. Truman there is a coal emergency in the Birmingham area.

Battle said Mr. Truman advised he is "very much concerned and that he is keeping in on reports daily."

He said he got no indication when the president might act, but that the president repeated to him what he has said before—that he would take appropriate action when he thought it was a national emergency.

Any presidential action presumably would be under the section which permits the Taft-Hartley law to ask the courts to stop a strike which threatens a national emergency.

Denham moved under an entirely different section of the law—that forbidding "unfair" practices.

Denham classed as violations of the T-H law two demands that Lewis had made on the mine operators:

1. The "able and willing" clause—permitting the union to call strikes almost at will under its contract.

2. The union shop. Denham said Lewis' insistence on this contract provision, requiring all miners to be union members, is illegal because the T-H law forbids the "closed shop." Lewis has failed to get the miners' consent in an NLRB election, as required by the T-H law.

3. The welfare fund management setup. Denham said the way Lewis wants it established to give benefits only to union members, and not to non union members, is discriminatory and a law violation.

History Florence Water Department Told To Civitans

Speaking before the members of the Florence Civitan club at its weekly luncheon meeting Tuesday noon at Basil's cafe, Frank Crow, manager of the Florence Water and Electricity Departments, described the development of the water department of Florence.

Mr. Crow traced the history of the water department from the year 1888 to the present time, describing its crude beginning under the privately owned Cypress Water company which served a very limited area. In 1889 the citizens of Florence were anxious to modernize and expand the system to meet the needs of an expected increase in population. A new privately owned system was put into operation but the expected boom collapsed leaving the company bankrupt. The system continued in private hands until 1915.

In 1915 the city of Florence purchased the water company and since that date the Florence water department has continued to expand its facilities to acquire the filter plants, storage tanks, and pumps needed to insure an adequate supply of pure water for the city.

President Albert Martin presided and J. H. McClanahan introduced the speaker. Visitors were R. C. Reeder, guest of W. B. Reeder; Rev. Richard Fell of Sheffield, guest of Rev. Edward G. Mullen; and H. C. Weatherly of Sheffield, guest of Winfield Allen.

board in action yesterday.

Folsom said he will support a resolution to have the state committee Saturday to continue the same traditional rules which have governed party primaries in the past.

The governor led an unsuccessful court battle in 1948 to force Alabama's electors to vote for President Truman. They were pledged to the Truman-Dixiecrat-Wright states rights ticket.

He said he supported all Democratic nominees in the general election "from justice of peace on up."

Governor Folsom released the text of a tentative resolution he said he expects to offer to the Democratic committee. It was as follows:

"Whereas, the Democratic party has always been in power, and always will be the dominate party in Alabama, and

"Whereas, what has made the Democratic party strong, virile and powerful in this state is the acknowledged independence of the individual members to express and advocate their views in party as well as state and national affairs, and

"Whereas there is now, and always has been divergent views ways in the party membership on many matters both state and national, not affecting the party loyalty of its members, therefore

"Be it resolved by the State Democratic Committee x x x that all Democrats in this state be urged to actively participate in the primary elections x x x to the end that the will of the majority of Alabama Democrats may be expressed, and party differences be settled within the party, with the same pledge to support the nominees of the primary elections as in the past."

the "national emergency act" by the mobilization" prediction today that he had been assured by Senator Lucas of Illinois and Vice President Barkley that they will get a vote on anti-job discrimination, anti-lynching and anti-poll tax measures "if it takes all summer."

There was every sign, however, that neither Lucas nor any other administration leader has any intention of keeping Congress in session in Washington all summer in a campaign year.

Lucas, among others, is a candidate for reelection. He is a supporter of the president's civil rights proposals but has encountered time-consuming Southern filibusters against them before.

As things now stand, the Senate probably will get around to a fair employment practices commission (FEPC) bill sometime in March. In the House, a crucial decision is almost at hand now.

Mr. Truman made it plain in yesterday's talk to reporters of his civil rights program that he is engaged in an all-out fight against a proposed change in the House rules he said would be a "serious blow" to passage of civil rights bills.

This proposed change would restore to the rules committee its authority to act on measures, and civil rights bills probably would be among those sat on. If the committee should refuse to act, it would take the power of a coalition of Southern Democrats and Republicans would be necessary to say what bills be in a position to say what bills could get before the House for a vote.

Southern Democrats backing the rules change sought a decisive vote tomorrow or Friday, to block first of all an early House vote on the FEPC bill. This is the cornerstone of the president's civil rights program. It would set up a commission to enforce bans on job discrimination against Negroes and others. Southern Democrats are dead-set against it. Many Republicans and Northern Democrats would join it, soon have it sidetracked but, because of political commitments, they don't want to go on record against it.

Republican Control Congress Predicted

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Republicans got a prediction from national chairman Guy G. Gabrielson today that their party will win control of congress in November.

The occasion was a party gathering, sort of a pocket-size national convention, called to draft a 1950 campaign platform. Gabrielson tied his prediction to an "if" in that connection.

He said that if the GOP comes out with a definite, sound and convincing" declaration of principles it will strengthen the party in the November voting "and give us once again working majorities in both senate and house."

Polish Delegate To U. N. Resigns; Asks U. S. Asylum

The walkout was part of a Russian campaign to have the U. N. kick out Nationalist Chinese delegates.

His resignation was disclosed in a letter to Trygve Lie, Secretary General of the U. N., in the absence of Juliusz Katz-Suchy, now on leave in Poland.

In his letter to Acheson, Rudzinski asked the United States to grant asylum for himself and his wife, Maria Anna. He asked the right to remain in the U. S.—"a country whose devotion to the cause of freedom. I learned to admire," he said.
