

IF MEN CAN FIGHT AND DIE AS ALLIES . . . All Races to Have One Place to Pray for Peace ... THEY CAN WORSHIP AND LIVE AS ALLIES

By H. I. PHILLIPS

PRAYER FOR U.N. CHAPEL

("The United Nations is to provide a non-denominational chapel in its new home where men of all nations may pray."—News Item)

In this small room will be the cathedral, the mosque, the synagogue, the temple and the parish chapel.

Within these four walls will be the prayer-room of the world. To this place let the white man and the black man, the Christian and the Jew, the yellow man and the brown man, the Hindu, the all races and creeds—gather to Molokai and the Buddhist—men of hear the still, small voice of whatever God they worship.

Here the representatives of all peoples shall come humbly and devoutly in their separate faiths and reach understandings that will save a stricken world.

Here let them kneel separately and at a time of their own choosing and ask their God or gods that their words and actions may never make mockery of the precepts of whatever religion they observe and cherish.

Guide them as they invoke You. Keep their minds clear and make their decisions just; rid them of suspicions, fears and hatreds. Let them never lose sight of the belief that the Supreme Being of their own faith and of all faiths loathes war and holds peace and the brotherhood of man foremost.

Seldom have the representatives of peoples from the four corners of the earth been in a more difficult spot; rarely have human beings faced tasks more colossal; never have their decisions meant life or death, joy or misery, laughter or tears to so many millions.

Grant that they may not quibble over the details of this room, its appointments or its mood.

Help them realize that if men can fight and die as allies; that men who serve together in the same armies and navies and in the same cause, should worship in the same cloister and in the same hope!

Here let all men find that if there is to be one church there must be one brotherhood, one depth of devotion, one abiding confidence in a Supreme Being.

Make them understand that if a man will not be contaminated in the use of another man's council chambers, routines and customs in daily considerations, he can never be contaminated by the use of a common meeting place for meditation and prayer.

Here may no man forget that in every faith a man of any other faith may find the essence of his faith; the belief in divine guidance. How strange that until now those who have come together from all parts of the earth to face the most complicated problems of recorded time have failed to provide a common meeting place in which to seek guidance!

Of all moments in history when men of every race, color and creed needed divine council, this is the most desperate. How barren and hopeless have been these edifices of world peace without recognition of a God above! How futile these proceedings in council chambers of 100 rooms without one room for a Creator!

May this quiet room be hallowed: Here there is no publicity; here, no photographers, no news cameras, no microphones, no loudspeakers.

Here he may sit not as an important statesman, harassed diplomat or instructed agent, worried about his reactions at home; but rather as a child reaching for the hand in which he has confidence, pleading for the light, believing that nothing matters more than a cause be just.

This room shall be no device of architects, blueprinters and construction crews—its value to be measured in tears; this shall be a room dedicated in the spirit of all faiths . . . a hushed chamber where every man may find the mood of his own temple.

Within these walls may the United Nations see the universal altar and find that guidance, inspiration and awe that every man may find no lasting peace and no brotherhood of man.

Here at last there is "room in the inn!"

STAGE SCREEN-RADIO

BY INEZ GERHARD

A LITTLE over two years ago two young men, a singer and a comedian, decided to form the team of Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis. Today they are considered top entertainers, switching from night clubs to radio to movies with the greatest of ease. There is no definite format for their NBC program on Sunday nights, except that they can be expected to show up on

MARTIN AND LEWIS

They have just completed a Paramount picture, "My Friend Irma"; Martin is Jerry's romantic interest in the movie version of the radio show, and Jerry, an orange-tie salesman is his side-kick. Give them another two years and there's no telling what they'll be doing!

Kirk Douglas is back in Hollywood under a New York visit that was strictly business; he covered the swing cases, getting background material for his first starring role, in Warner Bros.' "Young Man With a Horn."

The famous coach in which King George V made his ceremonial drive at the Royal Ascot race meeting will be used in a sequence in Alfred Hitchcock's "Under Capricorn." Ingrid Bergman, Joseph Cotton and Michael Wilding star.

Lucille Ball, of the movies and CBS' "My Favorite Husband," may be a glamorous star to other people, but to her bandleader husband, Desi Arnaz, she's "Johnny." He gave her the nickname because, around their ranch, she looks like a tomboy. Her favorite "at home" togs are dungarees and an old sweater and straw hat.

Barbara Stanwyck, whose autumn hair is now mostly a beautiful gray, refuses to dye it for films. She feels that would be dishonest. Anyway, she thinks dyed hair looks artificial and gray hair is usually becoming.

The Fiction Corner

3 Minute Fiction

I HAVE NEVER known a mar. to be more wholeheartedly disliked than Henry Spafford. The reason for it is his braggarty qualities, his overbearing sense of importance.

We tolerate him because we like his wife, Madge, but even so our toleration is a chore. The other night it was over to the Spaffords' and sat through an hour of Henry's bragging. It seems that the big boss in New York—Henry is employed by the Jason Reid Steamship Company—called up the Philadelphia office where Henry works and they answered the phone.

"Jay's a great guy," Henry told me, referring to the incident. "He's asked me to run up to New York to see him a couple of times. I must remember to do that."

"Who's Jay?" I asked.

"Jay?" Why, Jason Reid, who owns the line, of course."

"Oh," I said.

"The way to get along in any business," Henry went on, "is to let the boss know right off he can depend on you. That's the way I am with Jay."

I left the Spafford home an hour later, furious that I had stayed so long, pitying Madge and disliking Henry with a renewed sense of disgust. "Something ought to be done about that punk. Now he's calling Old Man Reid, Jay."

"The thing to do, Betty smiled, "is to be amused at his ravings, and ignore him. He doesn't hurt any one, and there's always Madge to think of."

"Even Madge," I replied, "won't keep me from hitting that guy one of these days. Something," I repeated, "ought to be done about him."

Whether or not my thinking about it had anything to do with what happened a couple of days later I will never know. Henry was fired. Without warning or explanation he was given a couple of weeks' pay and was bounced out on his lard.

My first reaction when Betty told me about it was one of exuberance, a fiendish desire to rush over there and gloat, to sneer: "I told you so! Why don't you call up your friend, Jay, wise guy? But this feeling passed immediately. Curiously it was followed by one of pity. The more I thought about it the deeper became my sympathy. What greater humiliation, I thought, could a man endure than this that confronted Henry Spafford?

Let Them be CORNALLY DISLIKED

By Richard H. Wilkinson

NEXT DAY I called Hal Wheaton and asked him to have lunch with me.

"Have you heard about Henry?" I asked when we were seated.

Hal nodded, averting my eyes. "I met the poor devil on the street this morning. I don't mind saying that it was an ordeal."

I thoughtfully lighted a cigaret. "Hal," I said, "think of Madge. Isn't there something we can do?"

"Well," said Hal, "I've been wondering, too, Poor Madge."

He coughed. "I called Bob Taylor of the Taylor Liners this morning. Bob says that he might be able to do something for Henry on our recommendation."

"I guess," I grinned, "that's the answer."

And it was. Henry and Madge were over three days later. "I understand you've got a new job?" I remarked to Henry.

"Yes," he said with a bored look on his face. "Bob Taylor called up as soon as he heard that I was free, and asked if I'd consider a position with him. Well, you know when a man offers you more money—"

I glanced at Betty. There was a faint smile on her face. I suppose she was amused. I hope so. Because an hour later, with Henry still blowing, I was mad enough to choke him, and almost did.

KATHLEEN NORRIS Tragedy of Self-Pity

ONCE, when I was a married girl, I went with my husband to dine with some friends of his. The married couple unknown to me until then.

He had told me that the wife was a brilliant woman, but unlucky. She had many gifts but she didn't seem able to succeed with any venture, even in the great city where everyone who knew was either painting, or singing, acting, dancing, or writing—writing anything: essays, stories, poems, advertisements, scenarios. Not everyone was successful then, but everyone confidently expected to be, sooner or later, and almost everyone was.

But not Olive. I knew her for 25 years after that first bridal dinner and she never did anything except talk about her bad luck. She played the piano delightfully, she was one of the wittiest women I ever knew, but somehow she got small pleasure out of either gift, even even socially she was always left behind.

Thought Only of Self

Her trouble was that she could think of nothing but herself, and of what everyone else was thinking of her. That everyone else might possibly have something better to think of never crossed her mind. Olive was self-centered. Like all self-centered women she was abnormally sensitive and managed to get into the news by her own efforts, that was said in her hearing immediately applicable to herself.

So at the first dinner, when we were both young women, her mind, lively, adventurous, determined that New York should give us the
