The Reserve Fiasco

mustered in the House to send both bills back to committee.

A draft law, of course, is a bare minimum as a defense measure. It simply provides a flow of replacements for existing armed forces stationed in America and around the globe. It does nothing to build a backlog of trained men for a major military emergency.

For this eventuality, this country sorely needs a substantial ploel of skilled military manpower. All the experts are agreed that in another war the action of the first few hours, days and weeks would be crucial. There would be not time for the cumbersome draft to prepare a vast citizen army for the urgent military tasks to be performed in that critical period.

The best conceived reserve plans already have gone

A Problem In Education

Throughout the years educational groups have been shouting that our teachers are underpaid. They certainly are—a lot of them—but a lot of them, even at present low salaries, are over-paid for the services they render. The good teacher, however, is caught fast in that old equality trap. Under the monopolistic system mow, the only relief the good teacher can hope for is through an across-the-board rates in pay that must be reamed out of reluctant legislators themselves caught in the trap of trying to make tax income meet the demands for public services. The result is that the good teacher has no monetary incentive to be a better teacher a batter-paying them teach only so long as they can't find a better-paying them teach only so long as they can't find a better-paying them teach only so long as they can't find a better-paying them teach only so long as they can't find a better-paying them teach only so long as they can't find a better-paying job.—By W. E. Debnam in the book, Then My Old Kentucky Home Good Night!

The Lattimore Case

One may disagree with some or all of the political views of Owen Lattimore, Johns Hopkins' professor who specializes in Far Eastern Affairs, while still recognizing that the perjury case against him was weak.

The courts appreciated that when they twice three out key indictments against him. The truth would seem to be that on the basis of the evidence available to it the government never should have brought suit against Lattimore. Reluctantly, it has finally reached this con clusion for itself.

Thoughts For Today

And the Philistine said, I defy the armier of Israel this day; give me a man, that we may fight together.—I Samuel 17:10.

The way of a superior man is threefold: virtuous, he free from anxieties; wise, he is free from perplexities; bold, he is free from fear.-Confucius. PETER EDSON'S COLUMN

There are times when Congress underrates the American citizen pretty bedly. The issue of building an adequate armed reserve is a perfect example. Over the Congress at last passe a four-year extension of the Congress for militage.

Opinion polls have shown again and again over the years that Americans believe in such a reserve and are prepared to bear the burdens it would entail. But a good many of the nation's lawmakers consistently act as if their countrymen couldn't face the tough realities.

They treat thorough-poing proposals for militray training like plots of a foreign government. They convey the notion that they fear even the slightest gesture toward a sound program spells death for them at the polls. Not until 60 hours before the laws were due to expire did Congress at last passe a four-year extension of the draft and a two-year renewal of the dooter draft. And even at that late date a surprisingly large vote was mustered in the House to send both bills back to committee.

whipped through the House by voice voice. It was not contain the antisegregation feature which it tripped up a similar bill more than a month ago.

Rep. Adam Powell of New York pleaded for his antisegregation amendment which was defeated 161 to 2. If he had succeeded the plan clearly would die a second death.

President Eisenhower wisely spoke out against inserting this feature in a reserve bill. The place to settle the segregation issue is in the larger area of life, not in the agreed to the second seath. It would be foolish to pretend, however, that a minimum reserve plan like the one presently under consideration is not also in danger from chronic opponents of all adequate training programs.

Men who would delay this or some respectable alternative plan much longer are, in the view of some, throwing the whole defense burden on veterans of Korea and World War II, who already have made a major contribution to the country's safety.

and world war II, who aneady have tribution to the country's safety.

Certainly it is clear that they are toying with the security of the United States.

Barbs Of Today

Policemen arrest an awful lot of people in autos who don't know what they're driving at.

There are said to be two million heavy drinkers in the United States. How many thin ones?

Some fathers hide a sneaky smile when the daughter's groom is called "the lucky man."

So They Say

If we press forward with a vigorous defense of the principles for which this country and the free world stand, we have no need to fear that we are in a losing race against the totalitarian way of life—Allen Dulles, CIA director.

Our government is financing a splendid far-flung program for education in other countries. But at home education has been too largely agnored by our national government.—William G. Carr, executive secretary of National Education Association.
